

FOUR DAYS
LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE CANADIAN AT QUEBEC.

QUEBEC, Tuesday, Sept. 9, 1856.

The steamship Canadian, from Liverpool the 27th ult., has arrived at this port. Her news is four days later than that brought by the Persia at New-York.

The steamship Fulton, sailed from Southampton for New-York, and the steamship City of Baltimore from Liverpool, for Philadelphia, on the 27th ult.

The Cunard steamship Arabia arrived out at Liverpool on the 25th ult.

The dinner to the Guards was given in the Surrey Garden, London, on the 25th ult. Two thousand men partook of it. Major Edwards, the oldest soldier in the Army, presided. The whole affair passed off very pleasantly.

Sir Wm. Temple, Minister at Naples, Lord Palmerston's only brother, is dead.

Sir Colin Campbell is to be appointed Inspector-General of Infantry.

Kensington was to lecture at Oldham.

A large Chartist meeting was held at Tadmortton to welcome the return of John Frost to public life.

Lord Ingelsthorpe has set up claims to the state and titles of the deceased Earl of Shrewsbury. The suit comes some interest.

FRANCE.

Everything is dull. The French are wholly employed with quarrelling with each other.

The Emperor and his family continue at Biarritz, and letter-writers continue to assert that the Emperor is suffering much from disease of the liver.

SPAIN.

We continue without direct intelligence from Spain. The Government is occupied in appointing new officers to all the Civil Departments, and they are mostly appointed from the liberal section.

The Epoca announces that the decree to suppress the whole National Guard will appear in a day or two. The National Guard of the Province of Madrid has already been disbanded. A further sum of £30,000 on the Cuba loans of 1854 and 1857, will be paid September 5.

PORTUGAL.

The bread riots are over and quiet is restored. Cholera is on the decline in Lisbon.

The Portuguese Government announce a loan of fifteen hundred contos in six per cent bonds, for public works.

A great many arrests have been made both among the troops and citizens, in the endeavor to detect a conspiracy in the recent riots. Some excitement was felt at the arrival of a strong French squadron in the Tagus.

The harvest in Portugal is now over and is even less than has been anticipated. The vines will prove a complete failure.

Disease has broken out among the cattle.

ITALY.

The principal item of news comes in a sheet not strictly reliable, namely: That the King of Naples, by the advice of Austria, demands to submit his difficulties with the Western Powers to the arbitration of a European Congress.

A very doubtful letter of the 11th says that a collision had taken place at Palermo, between the Neapolitan troops and the Swiss.

The crops are said to be not so large an average throughout the Neapolitan territory was expected. Austria has ordered the sequestration of property of Lombard exiles to be sold.

PRUSSIA.

The Prussian papers publish minute accounts of the recent encounter between the Prussian corps and the French army. The Prussian facts do not differ from those already published. The event caused intense excitement in Berlin, but it is probably incorrect that Prussia has asked the aid of France and England—the feeling being that Prussia herself should undertake the chastisement of the pirates. Russia has volunteered two or three ships to aid any expedition that Prussia may fit out.

DENMARK.

A letter from Hamburg says, that in the affair of the Sound Dues, great hopes are entertained that England will speedily accede to the plan of capitalization. These hopes were strengthened by the return of Mr. Buchanan, the English Minister, who had been to London to confer with his Government on the subject. During the past month 2,906 vessels had passed through the Sound. Of these, 596 were Swedish, 760 English, 350 Prussian, 70 French, 50 Russian, and 22 American.

GERMANY.

The Hunania steamship, from New-York, arrived at Hamburg on the 21st ult., after a passage of nineteen days. Her machinery was not damaged as was reported. She sails September 1st, and all her berth are taken.

SWEDEN.

Some few fatal cases of cholera had occurred at Stockholm. Gen. Andrew Bodisco, the Russian military Envoy, was the first victim.

RUSSIA.

The following dispatch comes from Constantinople under date of August 10th:

"The Russian reply gives hopes of the surrender of Belgrade. Hussein Pasha is to receive Kara from the Russian Col. Meickoff."

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.—The advices by which Arabia had no effect whatever on the COTTON market, which was unchanged in every respect. The market was to a moderate extent; the sales of the three days amounted to about 25,000 bales, of which 10,000 were for export and 15,000 for home consumption. The quotations advised by the Piers are continued.

MARSHFIELD MARKET.—A moderate demand existed for goods and produce. The market was steady, and prices were firm. The quotations advised by the Piers are continued.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET.—A slight improvement is noticed generally in Broadstuffs. Wheat was firmer, especially for the better descriptions, while inferior was neglected. Flour was steady, and prices were firm. The quotations advised by the Piers are continued.

LIVERPOOL CATTLE MARKET.—No material change had taken place in the CATTLE market since the departure of the Persia. Cattle for home consumption were in demand, and prices were firm. The quotations advised by the Piers are continued.

MOVEMENTS OF THE HON. JOHN C. BRECKENRIDGE.—FIRE.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Sept. 9, 1856.

The Hon. John C. Breckinridge is expected to arrive in this city this evening, and the Democrats are making great preparations to receive him. He is expected to arrive at the Hotel de la Fayette, and will speak at the Democratic meeting to be held here on the 17th inst.

Hon. John C. Breckinridge did not arrive here this evening as was expected, having stopped at Lancaster to call on Mr. Buchanan.

Dickson's cotton mill, in the Twenty-third Ward, was burned this evening. The fire commenced in the drying room. Eighty persons in the upper stories narrowly escaped with their lives, many of them having to leap from the windows. Loss $18,000.

Messrs. Arthur A. Bonham's patent self-sealing fruit factory was burned this morning, and the upper part of an uncompleted building owned by E. N. Satter was also destroyed. Loss $30,000. Mostly insured.

FILLMORE CONVENTION.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., September 9, 1856.

At the Fillmore Convention at Newport, today, eighteen out of the thirty-one towns were represented.

Mr. Sprague of Warwick, Oray Tait of Providence, Henry Y. Crampton of Newport, and Daniel Rodman of South Kingstown were nominated as Electors of President and Vice-President.

AMERICAN MASS MEETING.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 9, 1856.

There was a large American mass meeting and procession here this evening. Speeches were delivered by Messrs. French, Evans and others.

SENTENCE OF GEO. M. TOWNSEND.

WILMINGTON, Tuesday, Sept. 9, 1856.

GEO. M. TOWNSEND, pleaded guilty this morning in the United States District Court to the charge of robbing the post-office in this city in August, 1855. He made a long appeal to the mercy of the Court, declaring that he had been led away by evil companions, and promising reformation if mercy was accorded him. Judge Hall sentenced him to two years hard labor, the lowest term for the offense.

THE NEXT STEAMSHIP AT HALIFAX.

HALIFAX, Tuesday, Sept. 9.—Noon.

A Cunard steamer is now ten days out from Liverpool for this port and may be considered about due. The Arabia ought to be the vessel, according to programme, but she is as doubtless taken into the dock on her arrival in Liverpool, to repair the damage sustained in a recent accident, the presumption is that the Cambria or some other unemployed vessel of the line has been substituted.

The steamship Osprey at this port from St. John's, Newfoundland, on Wednesday last, reports that the pioneer of the new line between Liverpool and New-York, the steamship Fulton, which was expected to leave Liverpool on the 27th ult., although then presumed to be eleven days out, has not yet arrived.

There are as yet no tidings of the Cunard steamer now due at this port from Liverpool. Weather clear.

THE NEW STEAMSHIP ADRIATIC.

BOSTON, Tuesday, September 9, 1856.

Mr. E. K. Collins, in answer to an invitation from numerous merchants of this city, promises that if time will allow he will make a visit to Boston with the new steamship Adriatic, before she sails for Liverpool in October next.

The Hon. Henry Wilson addressed a large Fremont gathering in Woburn last evening.

THE SOUTHERN MAIL.

BALTIMORE, Tuesday, Sept. 9, 1856.

New-Orleans papers of Wednesday last are to hand. Dates from Galveston, Texas, to the 30th ult. speak of the continuance of a prolonged drought throughout the State. Drinking water was failing and cattle were dying.

Lieut. Gardner of the United States revenue cutter Taney was drowned in Savannah harbor by the upsetting of a boat.

SERIOUS FIRE.

COLEMAN, Pa., Tuesday, Sept. 9, 1856.

A serious fire is raging opposite the town of Wrightsville, destroying the lumber-yards along the river. The Columbia firemen have gone to their neighbors to ask assistance.

BOSTON WEEKLY BANK STATEMENT.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Sept. 9, 1856.

The following are the footings of our Bank Statement for the past week:

Capital Stock.....$31,000,000

Loans and Discounts.....$6,000,000

Specie.....$6,000,000

Amount due from other Banks.....$7,175,000

Deposits.....$1,940,000

Uncollected.....$7,142,000

POLITICAL ITEMS.

—Mr. Briggs of Ohio, we learn, addressed a meeting of more than a thousand on Thursday p. m., at Boston, and in the evening of the same day spoke to the Republicans of Morristown. The best feeling prevailed, and the enemies of slave-extension in New-Jersey are determined to give the vote of that State to Fremont and Dayton, and they will do it.

—On Saturday evening last, the friends of Mr. Fillmore, in Newark, Conn., held a mass meeting at this village, pursuant to public notice, at which an incident occurred we think too good to be lost. For about a week previous to the meeting, the most zealous advocates of Mr. Fillmore were actively engaged in drumming up all the show possible for the occasion; but still fearing that the turnout would be rather a slim affair, they hit upon a novel expedient to attract a result. The friends of Mr. Buchanan, as well as those of Mr. Fillmore, being equally interested in making as bold a front in opposition to Fremont as possible, it was mutually agreed upon that the Buchanan men should attend the Fillmore mass meeting in all their strength, and the Fillmore men should attend the Buchanan mass meeting in all their strength. Such unlooked-for ingenuity being thus arranged, Mr. Brooks of the Express was invited to address the meeting on Saturday evening, with the assurance that he should have a well-filled hall of attentive listeners to his speech. The Committee, however, withheld from Mr. B. the secret of the arrangement, and he accordingly appeared as the champion of the American party; consequently Mr. B. took occasion, in the course of his speech, to pitch into the Democratic nominee and his friends, and to denounce the policy of the Union. Matters being thus arranged, Mr. Brooks of the Express was invited to address the meeting on Saturday evening, with the assurance that he should have a well-filled hall of attentive listeners to his speech. The Committee, however, withheld from Mr. B. the secret of the arrangement, and he accordingly appeared as the champion of the American party; consequently Mr. B. took occasion, in the course of his speech, to pitch into the Democratic nominee and his friends, and to denounce the policy of the Union.

—Greenwich, Conn., turned out, well, as we learn, Wednesday evening, on the call of the Fremont Club of the village. The gathering was in and around the Court-House, which was insufficient to hold the number that attended. The meeting was called to order at the appointed hour, by Mr. Burton, President of the Club, a young man with all the ardor and generous emotions of youth yet unquenched. In a few well-chosen words he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object of the meeting to be to listen to some speakers from abroad, who would cheer them with good tidings from other quarters, and set forth generally the obligations which now so peculiarly rest upon all who loved Freedom and the Union to exert themselves strenuously until the election in forwarding the cause of Freedom and Union as illustrated by its young and ever successful standard-bearer, John C. Fremont. After the cheers had subsided with which the first mention of that name was greeted, Mr. Burton introduced Mr. Carter of N. Y., a young lawyer, whose first political speech it was said to be. If successful, whether so or not—he acquitted himself with great ability. In a calm yet fervid address, Mr. Carter reviewed the whole ground of controversy, and narrowing it down to only the one issue—Freedom or Slavery in Kansas; and he then, in a few well-chosen words, he announced the object